

Business interruption insurance at a glance

What is business interruption insurance?

If your business suffered an unexpected disruption, such as a fire, flood or storm, or a major supplier closes because of one of these events, how long would it take to get it up and running again? And how much would you lose along the way?

Business interruption insurance can help make sure your business keeps running smoothly after an unexpected event, by covering the turnover that is lost – so you can recover and rebuild.

Who should consider it?

For most business owners, there are ongoing expenses that you need to pay even if you're not generating any revenue – like staff wages, supplier invoices, rent or loan repayments.

Business interruption insurance can get you through a temporary crisis by protecting your cashflow – so you can pay these expenses and help ensure the future of your business.

“Insurance can help your business get back on its feet if things go wrong. You can insure against disasters and for business disruption to cover your losses during the recovery period.”

Department of Innovation, industry and science, 2018

It's estimated that natural disasters cost Australia $11 billion on average each year.

(Actuaries Institute, The cost and funding of natural disasters in Australia – current position paper draft for discussion, 2016)

The top two risks to businesses around the world are extreme weather events and natural disasters.

(Fortune, 'These Are the Biggest Risks for Businesses in 2018, According to the World Economic Forum,' 2018)

While most companies insure their building and contents against disasters like fire, theft and storms, many neglect to insure for the interruption to their business caused by these events.

What can it cover?

Business interruption insurance can cover the loss of any sales you would have made while your business is out of action – plus any extra costs you incur to stay open.

Depending upon the policy, business interruption insurance can cover:

Type of cover	Potential benefits
Revenue/income	Repair or replacement of property damaged.
Fixed costs	Loss of trading profit following insured damage to property and additional costs and expenses incurred during a claim.
Temporary relocation	Repair or replacement of property stolen.
Extra expenses	Loss of money.
Civil authority ingress/egress	Your liability to pay compensation for personal injury and property damage as well as the costs involved in defending a claim triggered by the policy.

What usually isn't covered?

Exclusions, the excess you need to pay and limits of liability can vary greatly depending on your insurer. In order to claim under a business interruption policy, the loss has to arise from damage to property (buildings, stock and contents) which was insured and the damage to property has to be claimable under that policy. Business interruption insurance is subject to the same exclusions as those in the policy covering buildings, stock and contents.

CASE STUDY

Linda is the owner of a small office supplies business – with eight staff on the payroll and numerous suppliers.

Late one night, the restaurant next door catches fire and it spreads to her business premises – destroying the property along with the stock and IT systems. She's unable to open the shop for weeks while the building is being repaired.

Because the business isn't operating, she's not making any money – meanwhile the bills are piling up.

But with business interruption insurance, Linda banks an insurance payment – maintaining her cash flow at pre-interruption level. Linda can continue paying her staff their regular wages, so they keep their jobs, and rents a temporary location so the store can keep running.
